But concurrent with the BULLETIN BOARDS. from any state incorporated in his vast ultimatum of Finland's people to the central government came disconcerting assurances from the Czar's then governo general in Finland, Prince Obelyenski, that Finland's people, from Uleaborg to Lake Ladoga, were ready and determined to act as well as parley.

In plain words, Finland was armed She had, too, been arming on general, too late for what and with what he is

People Want Still More.

After the people of Finland practically out of the country, or, like the Russian frontier customs, allowed them to remain for the nonce on sufferance, after an efficient Red Guard and other military or-licient Red Guard and Red Guard Re ganizations were fait accompli, the Czar found it expedient "graciously" to grant to Finland the constitution he had found expedient to deny to any and very other area in his dominions. Finland's inhabitants were given a wide neasure of popular enfranchisement-an electoral competency exceeding that of not few foreign states already enfranchised for decades or generations. What espe-ially disconcerts the central government authorities in St. Petersburg, however, is that the appetite of Finland for reform has, like Oliver Twist's, been but tempor arily appeased. Finland wants more, and what is very much worse, Finland is further "ready" to clinch for more.

Weapon for Every Adult. At the present moment, at a modest computation, the stock of revolvers, long barrels, long distance pistols, carbines, Berdans, and other rifles in Finland is of sufficiency to arm effectively every male in Finland over twenty years of age. They have poured into Finland through the Bothnia Gulf, been stored in the Province of Ulcaberg, under the very nose of Russian frontier and other officials, compelled to wink at these cargoes of cased weapons and ammunition, smuggled through from Hamburg or Swedish ports.

of weeks of the landing of the gross consignment away in the far North Bothnia. It must be carefully borne in mind that the recent disbandment of the bulk of Capt. Kokhul's former Red Guards of Finland did not in any way effect either the actual military readiness of Finland's row actual military readiness of Finland's row.

Revolutionists Well Under Cover. A Finnish leader, asked how many train-d men he could muster in mid-Finland wanted—Tailors and Pressers, AT once, Leon, 1755 Pa. ave. nw. ocl24f d men he could muster in mid-Finland in a fortnight, is reported to have answered that he had not the latest Finnish census at his command. In answer to a further remark, "strange, though, WANTED-WHITE COOK AND HOUSEMAID colored cook, housemaid, general worker; good little or nothing is to be seen anywhere of armed groups," he is reported to have dryly rejoined further that good Finns, like good bunnies, knew when to keep freely mooted that when the past wave of revolution sweeps over the empire it will probably sweep over St. Petersburg itself from the north and the vicinity of Lake Ladoga. The torpedo-boat flotilla to stop contraband, put in that lake some months ago, has proved useless in preventing the landing of arms and am-munition. Such military men point further that as Finland, with its wrested fice, constitution, is now already semi-autonomous, and Russia's authority in many parts of Finland is de facto. Russian revolutionaries proper will be welcome guests later on, should they decide to make their initial armed spring from Finnish territory. Instead of territory, instead of courting renewed dis comfiture by striking in a government-
